JUDSON COLLEGE
ELGIN, ILLINOIS

JUDSON

To Dr. Benjamin Patterson Browne, our beloved president, we dedicate this first issue of THE LANTERN. Without Dr. Browne, humanly speaking, we would have no LANTERN, nor would we have our beautiful Judson College. Like the Apostle Paul who said, "For a great door and effectual is opened into me, and there are many adversaries," so our president gave more attention to the door God opened to him than he did to those who saw only obstacles.

Judson College is enriched by the amazing accumulation of accomplishments of Dr. Browne. Even ten years ago WHO'S WHO needed 36 lines for his biographical data. Educated at Harvard, Boston University and Newton, he has also been honored with a D.D., Litt.D., and Ph. D. After serving pastorates in New England he became state secretary in Massachusetts, Delaware and Pennsylvania. For fifteen years he was Editor-in-Chief for the American Baptist Publication Society. He organized and directed the Christian Writers' Conference at Green Lake which included the International Writers' School. He founded writers' conferences at Syracuse University, Redlands University and at Eastern Baptist College.

Author of eight books, he was also president (1962-1963) of the American Baptist Theological Seminary (now at Oakbrook) and our Judson College. During that time he supervised the relocation of the two schools, a project involving the construction of many new buildings.

Everyone at Judson College is happy that Dr. and Mrs. Browne chose to build their new home at the north edge of our Campus. Mrs. Browne, besides being a well-known artist, is helping with the Christian Authors' Guild which trains people in writing—all by mail. Her warm personality, her graciousness on all occasions, and her Christian character contribute greatly to the effective ministries of President Browne.

Dr. Browne honors God in all his great work. He is a man of prayer, and therefore he is a man of great daring.

COLLEGE

1963

Beginning with nothing in January of 1963, he asked God for all the marvelous marks of progress seen on Judson Campus in mid-1964, with still greater miracles to come. He ascribes all glory to God for Judson's spectacular development. This explains why God trusts him with such a tremendous undertaking as building a good college.

In contacts with students Dr. Browne is at his best. Cordial, affectionate, thoughtful, stimulating and Christlike, he inspires us all to be at our very best. To that end he is giving his utmost to build an effective college, one that will train young men and women to be Christians with determination to be useful.

THE LANTERN salutes Dr. Browne for the light he gives to all who know him, to all who hear him, and to all who read his many literary productions. We learn from him that "it is better to light a candle than it is to curse the darkness." Our president illustrates the proverb, "The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." The lanterns beside Judson College's beautiful walks will always remind us of the faithfulness, the illumination of godly character and the beauty of a life indwelt by the Lord Jesus Christ. Our lives will all be brighter for having lived in the light of Dr. Browne's Christian influence.

Volkman Hall

Here is a man of faith and purpose. He assumed the duties of Dean of the College in September, 1960. His vision was of a theological college growing into a complete liberal arts college.

The goal calls for a school which is to be conservative in theology, yet foremost in education. The means to achieve this, he believes, is to constantly strive for excellence. He himself sets an example in discipline. He displayed optimism at times when others did not. During difficult and trying times he maintained a sense of equanimity.

Besides the wide breadth of knowledge and experience which is his, he possesses a sense of humor that adds to his perspective.

He will take time out of a busy schedule to counsel a student—to give a word of encouragement and inspiration, or even sincere commendation.

“His heart was always open
And his door was never closed.”

EDGAR W. BOSS, Dean

LELA SUSAN WRIGHT, Associate Professor of English; B.A., West Virginia University; M.R.E., Eastern Baptist Seminary; M.A., University of Tulsa.

GEORGE WILLIAM KING, Assistant Professor of English; AB., Th.B., Eastern Baptist College; M.A., University of Denver.

Whether one speaks, writes or reads, his activity falls within the scope of the English Department. For this whole field is a great undergirding discipline, a training ground in speaking, writing, thinking.

Here one can sharpen his knowledge of the language and his skills in using it. He can know the sense of achievement and growth in isolating ideas and clothing them in increasingly expressive words.

Before the student stretches the vast field of literature from which he can draw inspirations, understanding and entertainment. As his acquaintance with these works increases, so his sensitivity to himself and his fellows will increase. He can laugh or cry, be drawn or repulsed, worship or condemn. But never can he be a smaller person for having opened his heart and his mind to the great ideas and creations of the ages.

THOMAS A. NOSWORTHY, Instructor in French; B.D., Th.M., Northern Baptist Seminary; graduate of Cours Permanent pour les Etrangers, University of Besancon, Besancon, France.

LOIS R. WARNER, Associate Professor of Christian Education, B.A., Wheaton College; M.R.E., Biblical Seminary.

ROBERT D. ERICKSON, Assistant Professor of Christian Religion, B.S., University of Minnesota; B.D., Bethel Seminary; Doctoral Studies, University of Chicago.

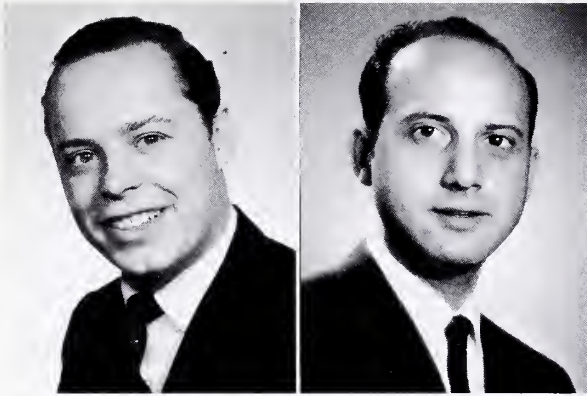

Students intending to enter Christian service, either vocationally or as lay persons, take courses in Christian Education. These courses include Christian Education history and philosophy, organization and administration, curriculum construction, and Christian Education either of children or of youth and adults. Those majoring in Christian Education engage in senior field work in a local church under the guidance of a church leader and a faculty member.

RICHARD BESANCON, Associate Professor of Philosophy, B.A., Wheaton College; M.A. Baylor University; B.D., Th.D., Northern Baptist Seminary; Graduate Studies, Northwestern University and Roosevelt University.

It is the aim of the philosophical disciplines to make the student aware of the need for critical and reflective thinking about the great issues of life. Effort is made to acquaint the student with the basic philosophical problems to the role they play in the vicissitudes of the contemporary world.

The student is introduced to the major types of philosophical schools which seek to offer answers to these problems. It is emphasized that Christian thinkers should develop a Christian world-and-life view which encompasses life as a whole and is built upon the perspective that God has revealed Himself in Christ and the Biblical revelation.

EDWARD L. THOMPSON, Associate Professor of Music, B.A., Wheaton College, B.D., Northern Baptist Seminary, M.Mus., American Conservatory of Music.

DAVID J. NELSON, Instructor in Music, B.Mus., M.Mus., American Conservatory of Music.

Music plays an important role in the life of the Church, and the music department of Judson purposes to provide for as many students as possible a background in music that will foster effective leadership in this field.

The College Choir engages in singing a variety of good Church music including works by the masters. Courses in music theory, Choral conducting, and appreciation of music are offered. Private instruction in voice, piano, and organ serves to develop the musical skills of students, that through music there may be effective communication of the gospel. Opportunities for performance are realized in chapel services and recitals.

JOHN LOGAN AUBLE, Professor of History; B.S., Hillsdale College; M.A., Ohio State University; Ph.D., Northwestern University; Post Graduate Studies, University of Chicago.

PAUL MERTZKE, Assistant Professor in Sociology and Economics; Ph.D., University of Wisconsin.

The Division of Social Sciences includes the Departments of Economics, Education, History and Political Science, Psychology, and Sociology. The two-year sequence in history alternates between American and European areas. At present, the Department of Psychology is proposing courses which will equip the student with more adequate tools for self-analysis and fruitful social contacts. The Department of Education is also undergoing expansion on behalf of those who plan to work in the secular and religious fields.

The objectives of The Division of Social Sciences are best summarized in the statement that all education should aim at equipping well-prepared future citizens for making a worthwhile life as well as a good living. With all the other sections of the college, it strives for these goals within a spiritually implemented Christian orientation.

JOHN E. JUERGENS-MEYER, Assistant Professor of Political Science; B.A., University of Illinois; M.A., Ph.D., Princeton University.

P. W. DAVIS, JR. Assistant Professor of Biology; B.S., DePauw University; M.A. Columbia University.

The aim of the Department of Biology this year has been to present life science from an intellectually respectable but biblically faithful point of view.

STANLEY E. ANDERSON, Director of Correspondence Department, B.A., Union University; Th.B., B.D., Th.D., Northern Baptist Seminary.

The Correspondence Department of Judson College offers a valuable service to about 700 people each year. Our Home Study plan offers to high school graduates anywhere a collegiate or theological study for only 25 dollars. These courses, 92 in all, include English, Bible, Science, Social Relations, History, Church, History, Missions, Systematic Theology, Philosophy, Psychology, Christian Education, Practical Theology, Evangelism, Music, Philosophy of Religion and New Testament Greek.

Home Study is not new; it has matured; many students say it is superior to some classroom work. Each student does his own study and research. This work is not easy for everyone. But serious students find that home study discipline is valuable training.

ANDREA DANIELSON, Secretary; PAUL THOMPSON, Business Manager; GEORGE BELL, Bookkeeper; INGEBORG HOULETTE, Assistant Bookkeeper.

Books constitute one of our greatest resources for knowledge. Think of the tragedy if one generation lacked the means to communicate knowledge to the next. Not only would this destroy all knowledge of history, but it would be impossible to convey any intellectual accomplishments. Many of the same mistakes would be repeated. In short, progress would be minimal.

At the present, there are tape and phonograph recordings and motion pictures which can be used also as an aid to education. But for thousands of years the written word alone was the chief means of communicating knowledge.

The library at Judson is endeavoring to meet the needs of the students. Besides reading material, there are also certain audio visual aids available. These facilities are being enlarged to assure a benefit to all.

*Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your father which is in

The club was organized under the direction of Dr. R. Besancon and Mr. R. Erickson, faculty advisors. Its present officers are: President Harold Sanders, Vice-president Garrett W. Yonker, Secretary-Treasurer Ronald F. King, Sergeant at Arms Robert Coats.

In our meetings this year we have sought to stimulate the awareness of the students to the contemporary world scene through films and guest speakers. We hope to enhance the ability of the constituency to appreciate varied world views and to formulate more effectively an appropriate Christ centered philosophy to meet the demands and complexities of the present scientific and uncertain age.

Judson Jargon reaches for the effect of "sectional vocabulary of a science, art, class, sect, trade, or profession . . ." It is a student newspaper in the language of students living and/or studying at Judson College. Its concerns are campus activities and reflections. Our jargon seeks not the contempt of the off-campus public but rather the immediate recognition and response of the inside student.

Judson Jargon is a monthly publication. As the college grows, we, the first newspaper staff, hope that the Jargon can become a weekly edition and can better provide an opportunity for leadership, for service to God, and to school, for pursuance of particular interests, for social enjoyment and educational growth. These are the doorways opened through membership in organizations. The Judson Jargon is one campus organization and thus is one such entranceway.

Judson College held its first Homecoming Dinner on November 14. Enthusiastic new students, also alumni from the old Chicago campus, sat down to a delicious buffet supper, spread in the multi-purpose room in Volkman Hall.

Senate President, Roderick Johnson, introduced Dean Boss, who greeted the guests. Board Chairman, William Brady, gave the invocation. Norman Haupt led in group singing, assisted at the piano by Merletta Hunter. Hedley Nosworthy favored with a solo. President Browne introduced his distinguished friend, Dr. Gordon Palmer of Los Angeles, formerly president of Eastern Theological Seminary in Philadelphia, whose stirring message presented the urgency of our calling.

The occasion was enhanced by the crowning of the Queen, Nancy Joy Gabosch, who was chosen by popular vote of the student body.

Dr. Willis Reed pronounced the benediction.

Chairman of Arrangements, Lorna Nosworthy, was most ably assisted by Judy Taft, Judy Bowlby, Diane Burman, Gary Henderson and Joe Roberts.

Homecoming

Tuesday, December 17, 1963, was the night of the first choir concert. This was a Christmas Musicale followed by the production of "Amahl and the Night Visitors," by Monetti.

The performance was given at the First Baptist Church in Elgin. The expression of our Christian faith in music is one of joyous and triumphant praise.

The object of the concert was to convey some of this joy and meaning of Christmas in a manner which would be of honor to God. Under the able casting and musical direction of Professor Edward L. Thompson, this evening was a success.

Eh??

That Final Rehearsal

Judson's high point of social activity for the winter season was the Winter Carnival, which climaxed its three-day program with a sumptuous banquet at the Evergreen Gardens in Dundee. Over seventy people in semi-formal attire, including students, faculty members and administration personnel, were greeted by King Howard Taylor and Queen Merletta Hunter. The dinner was superb.

In a magic atmosphere a delightful musical program was presented by Kay Keasler, Karen Kesl, Hedley Nosworthy, Judy Baumgartner, Merletta Hunter, and Diane McKillip. Professor George King obliged by singing several amusing numbers.

Lorna Nosworthy is to be complimented for her good taste in arranging for this event.

Seniors

To develop ourselves both spiritually and intellectually was the goal of the Senior Class. We learned to place our values on things that are not necessarily a personal gain, by realizing that college should not be preparation for promoting our personal wants, but a period in which we learn to serve others. Intellectually, we broadened our horizons; we were introduced to new concepts, new ideas, and new theories of which we accepted many but rejected an equal number. We learned during the process how little we knew—that college is just a “jumping-off place” for a life long quest for knowledge.

Development in all areas of our lives takes work; and work requires discipline; and discipline requires will; and with this will we can attain higher goals to which we all strive.

We are the first graduating class from Judson, leaving the campus with a hope—a hope that we could do better, than in the past and a hope that we achieve newer heights in the future.

The 1963-4 school year proved to be a year of vast change. There were some problems to face and to overcome; but this new year served to be a real inspiration. Each new thing we do sets "tradition" rather than follows it. The class members are enthused with the future prospects of Judson College. Each one wants to do his part to insure the future of this fine school.

Freshmen

We, the 1963-64 Freshman Class of Judson College, have been blessed and privileged to be the first freshman class on the new campus of Judson College. We have experienced both the comforts and the hardships that accompany the establishing of a new campus. During the early weeks of our first semester we were inconvenienced because of the uncompleted dormitory, but instead of discouraging us, this hardship drew us closer and began to toughen us for the many difficulties that were to follow.

As the semester progressed, we adapted ourselves to the routine life of college students. Many times we were discouraged and homesick, but by the grace of God we endured. Most of us received our initial taste for mid-terms and finals during the first trimester and we are now old veterans at burning midnight oil.

Perhaps the most valuable lesson and training we have received at college is that of prayer. Probably without exception prayer has given each student here at Judson the strength and courage to go on when everything seemed black and hopeless. I am sure that as we continue at Judson and throughout life we shall continue to turn to God through prayer for our strength.
